

ARTICLE APPEARED
ON PAGE C-4

WASHINGTON POST
10 August 1984

OBITUARIES

Natalie Tatum Warren, 62, a typist with the Central Intelligence Agency, where she worked for 20 years before she retired in 1977, died of cancer Aug. 5 at St. Mary's Hospital in Leonardtown, Md. She lived in D.C.

Mrs. Warren was born in Washington and graduated from Cardozo High School. She joined the old War Department in 1942 and later worked for the old Post Office Department and National Capital Housing before she joined the CIA in 1955.

She was a founding member of Club MRS, a social club. She also was a member and usher at Union Wesley AME Zion Church in Washington.

Her husband, Edward (Eddie) Warren, died in 1972.

Survivors include a son, Edward, of Washington; three sisters, Sarah T. Honesty, Althea T. Phillips, and Nancy E. Bradley, all of Washington; three brothers, Bernard A. Tatum, John F. Tatum, and Craig W. Tatum, also of Washington, and three grandchildren.